The Role of Institutions in Resource-Limited Settings in Advancing Global Health: Perspectives from Dhulikhel Hospital, Nepal

Dr. Biraj M. Karmacharya, MBBS, MSc
Chief, Department of Community Programs
Assistant Professor, Department of Community Medicine
Dhulikhel Hospital-Kathmandu University School of Medical Sciences

Thursday, March 6, 2014
5:00-6:00pm
Room 1010 Medical Sciences Center
1300 University Ave.

This will be a presentation of an interesting story of how Dhulikhel Hospital-Kathmandu University School of Medical Sciences, a community-based health institution in Nepal that had a modest beginning less than two decades ago, is now spearheading innovations in health care delivery in resource-limited settings and how that can have an important implication in a global health context.

Students, faculty, staff, community members—all are invited to attend.

The Global Health Seminar Series exists to raise awareness, stimulate interest, and bring visibility to global health efforts underway at the University of Wisconsin and beyond, and to provide opportunities for networking and development of new global health initiatives. Questions? Call or email Betsy Teigland at 262-3862, teigland@wisc.edu.